

Radio frequency identification simulator

Abstract

A method and system for simulating radio frequency identification (RFID) systems. The system determines RFID system configurations and components that meet user constraints to facilitate planning for RFID system deployment. The simulator updates a database on the basis user input and radio frequency interrogator data from deployed systems.